

Corporationalism

{ Ryan Ragaglia

- ⌘ What if there were no governments?
- ⌘ What if market forces determined all human behavior?
- ⌘ How would this system function?
- ⌘ What are the advantages and disadvantages?

Thought Experiment

- ⌘ The End of the Nation-State
- ⌘ Governmental policies, such as protectionism, inhibit economic growth
- ⌘ Governments need to give economic autonomy to economic regions, and the standard of living of everyone will increase

Kenichi Ohmae

⌘ Atlas Shrugged

⌘ Atlantis

⌘ Individuals ought to be able to pursue their own success without being forced to support others

Ayn Rand

- ⌘ Redefinition of corporation:
 - ⌘ Anything that buys, sells, or produces goods or services (Businesses, churches, schools, etc.)
- ⌘ Competition within industries
- ⌘ Supply

Corporations

- ⌘ Sell their labor to corporations
- ⌘ Free Movement
- ⌘ Demand

Individuals

- ⌘ Following Ohmae, nation-state governments become less influential in the face of economics
- ⌘ Governments may become more like security corporations
- ⌘ World without borders, with free flow of labor, goods, services, and ideas

Implementation

- ⌘ Infrastructure & Public Services
- ⌘ Education
- ⌘ Security
 - ⌘ Economic Peace Theory
 - ⌘ Security/Judicial Corporations

Replacing Government

- ⌘ Market demand for 'regulation'
 - ⌘ Green products
- ⌘ The Monfort Plan

Regulation

- ⌘ Physical contract with corporations
- ⌘ Individuals choose their 'governments'

The Social Contract

- ⌘ 2012 election: 29% of American populace voted for Obama
- ⌘ In markets, 100% participation
- ⌘ Majority demand is satisfied
- ⌘ Minority demand is satisfied

Rule by Majority

- ⌘ Protectionist policies reduce economic prosperity
- ⌘ Removing 'lobbyist' groups reduces these inefficiencies
- ⌘ Interest Groups can find corporations that address their needs (or even form their own corporation), but are forced to comply to market forces

Special Interest Groups

- ⌘ Laws would not necessarily exist, because there would be no governments to enforce them
- ⌘ Corporate Law
- ⌘ Judicial corporations (corporations hire judiciaries to provide those services)
- ⌘ Corporational Pacts

Crime

- ⌘ Capitalism has a tendency to monopolize
- ⌘ As competitors lose, they are absorbed by others
- ⌘ Complete monopoly would be difficult to attain, but would also lead to the downfall of corporationalism

Monopoly

- ⌘ World without governments
- ⌘ World in which demand and production drive behavior
- ⌘ Free flow of economic activity
